Skinner House at Ridgeley, landmark for over 60 years to be razed. This house which the builder

Sam O'Bannon, described as having been built by moon light and plastered with soft soap. This place was one of the best tavern stands on Springfield road between there and Alton. Thousands of head of live stock were fed and rested here and even droves of turkeys four or 500 in number were often seen via this route on their way to market. The build-

Senator Yates speaks to citizens of Ill. in Washington, in which he praises Pres. Lincoln and refers also to Senator Trumbull, saying: "But not alone has Ill. given the greatest president and most renowned general and a rank and file unsurpassed by those of any other State, but also a statesman to whom it has been your pleasing duty to show your high appreciation tonight. Distinguished for great legal attainments, honored by high position in the executive department of the State by a seat on the Supreme bench, a member of the National House of Representatives and of the Senate of the U.S., which station he had adorned for the last 12 years so that to great ability, unfaltering energy and lofty devotion to country, he has added the experience which installs him in the front rank of American patriot statesmen." "Fellow citizens, Lyman Trumbull was not on the field of battle; his duty called elsewhere, and in the theatre of high debate on yonder hill and elsewhere upon the American forum, he did as much by his brave words to thwart the devices and withstand the assaults of treason as any general from whose bright blade the beam of glory glitters," Mar. 15, 1867, p.4, c.1

Senator Trumbull retires from U.S. Senate, after 18 yrs. continuous service and becomes private citizen. "Few Senators have left a stronger impress than he upon the legislation and constitution of the country," Mar. 7, 1873, p.2, c.1

"In 1855 - 5 men held the balance of power in the Legislature and controlled the election of a U.S. Senator. They were ex-Governor Palmer, Norman B. Judd, Burton C. Cook, Henry S. Baker, now Judge in the Alton District, George T. Allen, of Alton, now physician at the St. Louis Marine Hospital. The Legislature consisted of 100 members, 75 in the House and 25 in the Senate, divided politically thus: Whigs and Abolitionists 47, Nebraska Democrats 48 and anti-Nebraska Democrats 5--those named above. Governor Palmer went into the Dem. caucus, and was expelled because he refused to be bound by the slavery men. The two houses were organized by the quintette. Then came the election for Senator to succeed Gen. Shields, who was renominated by the Nebraska men, the Whigs nominated Lincoln and the quintette, Lyman Trumbull of Alton. After many unsuccessful ballots and changing by the Nebraska men from Lincoln to Matteson, they gave way and went over in a body to Trumbull, securing his election. Palmer, Judd, William B. Ogden, Judge Underwood (of St. Clair) and General McClernand came very near taking Trumbull's place, but none of them thought they had any chance. It is probable that the action of the five gentlemen named above was the pivot upon which all subsequent political events have turned. Had these five Legislators gone over to the Whigs, instead of the Whigs to them, and elected Lincoln to the Senate, the latter would never, probably have become the leader of the new Republican party, certainly would never have made his famous campaign against Douglas, in 1858, which brought him so prominently, before the country as the great Anti-Slavery leader. Palmer would never have become one of Lincoln's trusted Generals and a Republican Gov. of Ill. Trumbull would never have had his splendid career of 18 yrs. as the master mind of the U.S. Senate," Jan. 7, 1875, p.2, c.3

RAILROADS--St. Clair, Madison & St. Louis Bridge R.R. Co.

Question before council: Who owns land along river front south of Front St. from Market to Henry: Ordinance passed by city council on Nov. 23, 1891, gave company that constructed Alton bridge across Miss. river right to this strip of land with exception of 100 ft. along river which was reserved for use of steamboat landings at any time. So far as is known no action was ever taken by city whereby city would get this strip back. Bridge ordinance shows that St. Clair, Madison & St. Louis Bridge & R.R. Co. was given right to construct bridge and were given land referred to above on condition they would use it for their r.r. tracks and for union passenger station, neither was ever built. Property never turned back. Notice served on owners of bridge for restoration of property; upon failure for them to comply with their part of contract, Aug. 18, 1917, Telegraph receives letter from W. H. Braznell of St. Louis, age 80, in regard to city hall. Says that city hall was built in 1856 not 1858, that his father was contractor; Edward Levis, one of builders of Ill. Glass Co. was carpenter contractor and John Ash, plasterer. Braznell says it was mistakenly reported that J.R. Mueller was architect. At outbreak of Civil War, Mueller worked for government as captain in Confederate army and was designer of Fts. Henry and Donelson. When Grant took Ft. Donelson, Miller was among prisoners and was sent to military prison here. Also says city hall was not built for opera house but that city fathers who had met in Hart's building needed new home and so erected this building. Market house located in front of Illini hotel gave Market St. its name. Capt. Jos. Brown, commander of "Altona" was mayor, May 15, 1924, p.1, c.2

World's Fair Addition to North Alton, Tract of ground on Elm St. to be platted and sold, Mar. 11, 1904, p.2, c.4

Washington school property bought by Robert Smith for State Capitol building 50 years ago to be disposed of, Oct. 4, 1904, p.1, c.3

Sale of Ill. Packing Co. to August Luer and Herman Luer at Alton, brought out interesting facts concerning ownership and title of property. Land located on Front, Alton and 2nd Sts. Lots were originally part of section 14, Alton township and were platted by Rufus Easton, Jan. 1, 1818, but survey was not named Alton. Christening followed, after brother of Rufus, whose name was Alton. Owner became involved later on and land was sold at sheriff's sale. Property went through various hands and came into ownership of Jesse Walton in 1859. Geo. S. Meyers and James T. Drummond bought portion of property in 1866 and 2 other properties in 1872. Meyers & Drummond started manufacture of tobacco and laid foundation of present fortunes. Dausman & Drummond Tobacco Co. incorporated in 1876 for $100,000 and changed name to Drummond Tobacco Co. in 1879. It was acquired by Drummond-Randle Tobacco Co., 1885, afterwards started as competitor of Drummond Tob. Co. which moved its plant to St. Louis. Litigation followed that involved question whether Drummond-Randle Co., could use name of Drummond on its labels. It was fight in courts between James T. Drummond on one side and John N. Drummond and Chas. H. Randle on other. John N. Drummond won suit, and Drummond-Randle Co. went out of business. Alton Packing & Refrigeration Co. purchased property in 1892, became Alton Packing Co. in 1899, was succeeded by Ill. Packing Co., 1906. August and Herman Luer bid in plant for $41,000 and named it Luer Packing Co., Apr. 28, 1911, p.1, c.1
